The brains are kept cool in freezers instead of quicklime or fortified antibacterial sewage in which the filter life (so to speak). Rotten Tomatoes Score: 9% Jim Jarmusch's zombie apocalypse classic "Dead Man" is a grim and brutal affair in which no zombie has a day job or a family or a love interest and pretty much everyone is a sociopath. It's the absolute antithesis of "World War Z" in which zombies aren't necessarily greedy for flesh and brain power, but thrive off love and non-violence. The cult favorite from 2004 tells the story of John Custis, an Atlanta detective who travels to New York in an effort to figure out a string of missing persons cases. When the subway system collapses, he finds himself in a world of marauding zombies, in the middle of a disease outbreak and with no way to get out. An adaptation of the Steven Gould novel, "When the Train Carried Hitler" also stars Jack Black in a surprisingly funny and intelligently told science fiction adventure. Rotten Tomatoes Score: 84% Not only is this a modern-day morality play with a lot more laughs than "I Spit On Your Grave," but "Super" is set in San Francisco which makes it perfect weather for all of those zombies being arrested for spitting, not that I know the answer to that. The film stars David Oyelowo as a young boy trying to protect his mother (Mo'Nique) from the devastating effects of Hurricane Katrina. To do so, he takes the to a trailer park where he finds his mother's boyfriend and a group of other black men. Rotten Tomatoes Score: 31% The "Zombieland" 50b96ab0b6
